

Connecting the Device to the Organization's Wi-Fi Network

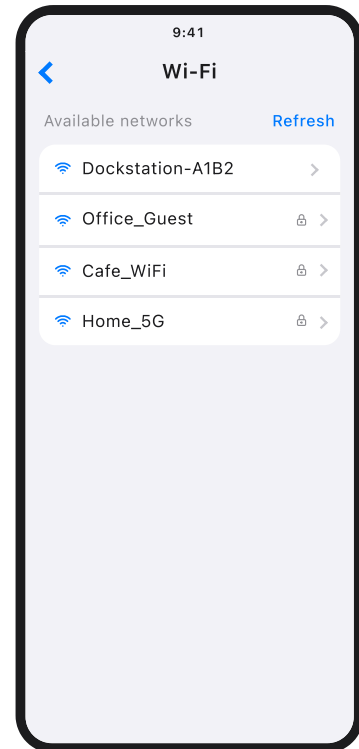

This instruction will help you initially set up the device (Dockstation) and connect it to your work Wi-Fi for internet access.

1

Connecting to the Device Network

First, you need to connect to the device directly from your smartphone.

- Open the Wi-Fi settings on your phone.
- In the list of available networks, find the network whose name starts with Dockstation- (it is open, without a password).
- Tap on it to connect.

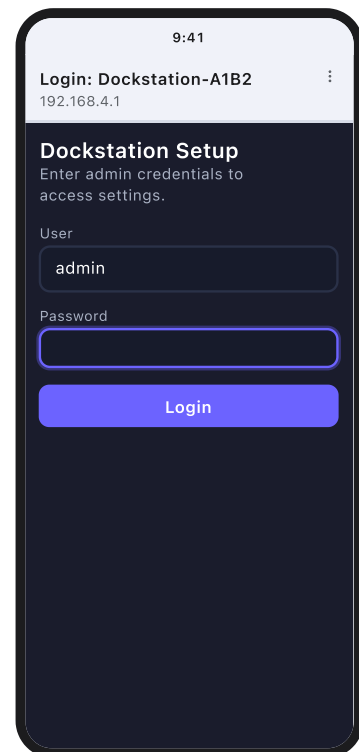

2

Logging into the Control Panel

Immediately after connecting to the network, your phone should automatically open the setup page. If this does not happen, open any browser and enter 192.168.4.1 in the address bar.

- On the Dockstation Setup screen, enter admin in the User field.
- In the Password field, enter the administrator password (provided separately).
- Click the Login button.

The administrator password is provided separately.
Do not share it with third parties.

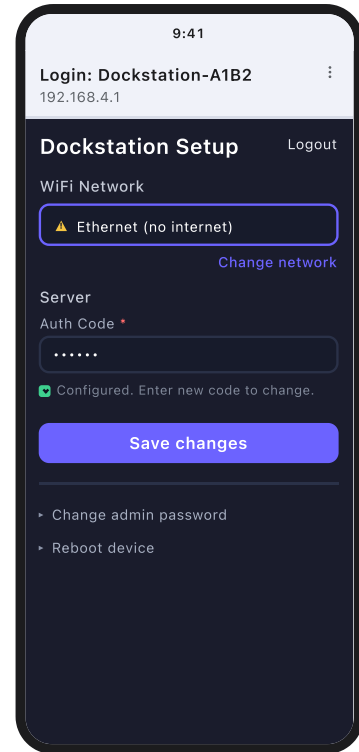

3

Navigating to Network Settings

After successful login, you will arrive at the device's main settings menu.

- In the WiFi Network block, you will see the current status (for example, Ethernet (no internet)).
- Click the blue link Change network on the right side.

4

Selecting the Work Network

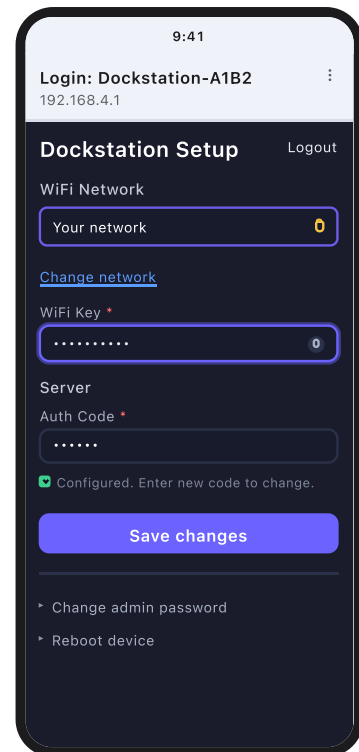

The device will scan the area and show all available Wi-Fi networks around.

- Scroll through the list and find your organization's work Wi-Fi network.
- Click on the line with the name of your network.

Entering the Password and Saving

- A new WiFi Key field will appear. Enter the password for your organization's selected network into it.
- Make sure the password is entered correctly (you can click the eye icon on the right to view the characters).
- Click the large blue button Save changes.

Done! The device will save the settings, reboot, and automatically connect to the internet via your organization's Wi-Fi. Your phone will then disconnect from the Dockstation network and return to its normal operating mode.
